

Transformer Condition Management – Level 1

ECSA Validation no: SAAMA2017135 for 2 credits

A short but intense training course for managing transformers in service by analysis of the transformers life blood – the oil

11 – 12 June 2019

The scope

Principles of Transformer Oil Management

This two-day course covers theoretical solutions for the analysis and management of transformer insulating oils:

Course objectives

Overview - day one

- Researching various oil types
- Transformer condition monitoring
- Laboratory processes
- Gas in oil interpretation
- Breakdown of oil molecules
- Calculations and ratios
- Visualising data
- Production rates
- Oil quality

Overview - day two

- Sample automation
- Moisture management and removal
- Life extension of the transformer
- Degree of polymerisation
- Analysis automation

Who should attend

- Maintenance technicians and engineers
- Operating personnel who have the delegated authority to return transformers to service
- Personnel who are involved in condition monitoring and maintenance managers

Course outcomes

- Post matriculation technical electrical qualifications or an understanding of the operation and construction of a transformer
- An operational knowledge of MS Excel (the interpretation of oil results involves calculations performed in MS Excel)
- Each delegate must bring their own laptop with MS Excel installed

The facilitator

Tom H Dalton |
Transformer Reliability
Specialist at Martec

He holds a National Higher Diploma in Electrical Engineering and gained experience at Eskom specialising in oil analysis and management. He has worked on several working groups and committees concerned with transformers and insulating oils, written a number of specifications, and has co-authored two books on the subject. Tom has also developed an insulating oil management application to assess transformer condition.
